The Keepers

An Alien Message for the Human Race
by Jim Sparks with Foreword by Dr. John E. Mack
Prologue by Linda Moulton Howe

From the Foreword

Jim Sparks's account provides one of our richest and most detailed documentations of an abduction history... He clearly shows how the experiences evolved, together with his own consciousness. But above all, Sparks's recall is altogether conscious, without the benefit of hypnosis, relaxation exercises or any other use of a non-ordinary states of consciousness for the exploration of buried memories.

Sparks was able to put aside his rage, overcome fear and accept that he was encountering some sort of technologically advanced non-human intelligence from which he could not escape. ...As he was able to surrender, the experiences transformed...

Sparks found out he had been inducted into a kind of "alien boot camp," a school of training and testing that made heavy use of riddles, ambiguity, paradox and symbolization. The purpose of his school seems to be two-fold: to create a hybrid race as an "insurance policy" for the future and to awaken us to our mindless destructiveness, so that we may halt the devastation we are bringing to Earth. ...He is unwavering in his conviction that we must heed the beings' warnings in order to stop the destruction of the environment and the death of the planet.

Jim's articulate and moving expression of his awakening of consciousness in relation to the abductions experience ...give his book power and importance.

— Dr. John E. Mack

Are there visitors from other realms attempting to help preserve our planet? If so, why?

I believe they have been farming us for raw materials. But now there's a problem, and their investment is in trouble. The aliens have spent a lot of time, travel and effort to farm us. But we are on an almost irreversible path of self-destruction... If we environmentally destroy ourselves, the aliens still have an excellent insurance policy. They've been collecting seeds from plants, animals and humans. Through semen and ova extraction, the aliens can start us, or other Earth life, all over again here or somewhere else.

Continued ...

Jim Sparks has interacted with aliens since 1988. What makes his story different is that he has conscious memories of his interactions. As a result of his encounters, he has gained psychic and telepathic abilities and has become aware of multidimensional aspects of reality.

Sparks has dealt primarily with the Greys, as they are called, although he has had encounters with different races, including the “scaly ones” commonly known as Reptilians. He has also seen humans interacting with the aliens and has been visited by those who do not want him to speak of his experiences.

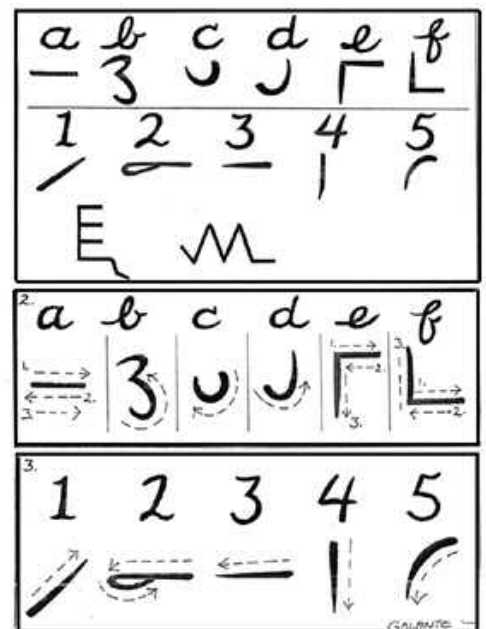

The central messages stressed throughout The Keepers is about the destruction of our environment, which is killing the planet. According to Sparks, who clearly heard a voice say to him, “Your planet is dying,” if we ever intend to join the galactic neighborhood, “we have to clean up our act. We have all the necessary resources to take care of our planet and people, yet unfortunately we are not honoring the planet and have not been responsible stewards of the resources. Time is running out -- we have to take care of our planet before we destroy it.”

Jim Sparks’s experiences of learning to work with the alien beings and how he overcame his fears is useful information for anyone who has experienced interactions with other worldly beings. He discovered how to calm himself in the intense energy field so that he could learn the alphabet they wanted him to know in order to communicate with the beings. His surrender finally came when he realized he could go home a lot sooner if he cooperated. Finally, he began to believe he was quite fortunate to have been chosen to “participate” in such a great “adventure.”

About the Author

Jim Sparks lives in the Nevada desert and works as a debt consultant. Born in 1954, he spent his early years in Florida. Sparks studied real estate at a community college in Florida and began working for a major condominium firm who eventually moved him to Houston in 1979. After twelve years he started J & J Properties, a natural land development company, which mostly operated in North Carolina. Sparks was now able to use his own philosophy and forbade removing more trees than necessary on each lot. At 34 years old, Sparks was happily married and financially successful, when his experiences with other worldly beings started. Life as he knew it began to unravel with these unexplained incidents. Now, eighteen years later, Sparks has moved from resister to cooperator and is sharing his experiences with others. A conservationist at heart, Sparks encourages others to support the work being done by the Nature Conservancy to help save critical acreage in the Atlantic Forest region of South America.
