

Project SERPO story gets more credible?
Alleged insider accounts revealed
Steve Hammons

February 27, 2006 - New information has been presented that gives people interested in the story of "Project SERPO" more to consider and evaluate.

In recent days, people involved in the Web site serpo.org have posted previously undisclosed alleged accounts from former military and other officials who were reportedly directly involved in some capacity with Project SERPO-related activities. Project SERPO is the alleged exchange program between astronaut-trained American military personnel and friendly visitors from a planet in the Zeta Reticuli star system in the 1960s and 70s. The beginnings of the program reportedly originated after the crash of extraterrestrial crafts in New Mexico in 1947. The follow-up efforts are alleged to have continued into the 1950s and led to a joint-service team of 12 specially-trained U.S. military personnel going with the visitors, aboard one of their advanced spacecraft, to their home planet for a 10-year stay, and returning to Earth in the late 1970s.

Natural questions have been raised about the authenticity of these reports. Is it a hoax and fiction? Is it a disinformation psychological operation (PSYOP) of some kind? Is it part of an acclimation program to further educate and prepare Americans and the international population for the reality of extraterrestrial visitation and activities on Earth? Or, is it something else or some combination of things?

If accurate or partially accurate, it is certainly interesting that this information has now become public and part of open source intelligence (OSINT). Rumors and accounts of this kind of operation have apparently been floating around military circles for many years. Recently though, allegedly, an unidentified person claiming to be a spokesman for six former and current officials of the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) has released new details about the alleged Project SERPO.

The new information that this anonymous person apparently has released is claimed to be, "some brief, but powerful testimonials from various USM people involved with 'Project SERPO,'" according to "Anonymous." These are alleged to be accounts from military personnel, people involved in the U.S. space program and similar kinds of individuals.

Though some of the information discussed in the new accounts has been posted on serpo.org over the last few months, the new data provides more to analyze and assess for truthfulness, understanding and clarification.

ALLEGED INSIDER ACCOUNTS

Anonymous seems to indicate that each following nine sections is from separate individuals. This text has been taken directly from the serpo.org Web site. The nine accounts below are only part of the newly-posted information. The structure of the 12-person U.S. team, their roles and three-digit identifiers (used for operational security reasons) have been previously discussed on the serpo.org site. The team roles and numbers are listed below, as allegedly reported by one of Anonymous' associates in the newly-posted information. Other new alleged accounts follow.

(1)

Team commander, 102

Assistant team commander, 203

Team pilot #1, 225

Team pilot #2, 308

Linguist #1, 420

Linguist #2, 475

Biologist, 518

Scientist #1, 633

Scientist #2, 661

Doctor #1, 700

Doctor #2, 754

Security, 899

(2) "Project CRYSTAL KNIGHT" was started in the early 1960s. This was part of the original U.S. Space Program, where U.S. military pilots were selected for astronauts. But the military program was classified "Top Secret" because their program involved an exchange of Extraterrestrial Biological Entities (EBEs). The EBEs came from another planet. They called themselves "Ebens" and came from the planet SERPO in the Zeta Reticular Star System, 42 light years away. The Ebens first came to Earth about 2,000 years ago and were involved in the genetic examination of Earth humans. The Ebens then left and returned in the early '40s, setting up a base in northern New Mexico. In 1947, two of their spacecrafts crashed in southern New Mexico. We discovered them and began a relationship with the Ebens. "Project CRYSTAL KNIGHT" was a program that exchanged 12 American astronauts with three Ebens. Our astronauts left on an Eben spacecraft and traveled to the planet SERPO for 12 years, returning in 1978. We are reading about this program in these releases. I was involved in the later program which came after 1978. We had an additional exchange program set up, under "Project BISHOP," but President Reagan cancelled the project in 1985.

(3) I was involved in "Project CRYSTAL KNIGHT" from about 1960 until 1965. I was assigned as a civilian to this project. I was a CIA employee, with a specialty of survival in a foreign environment. I was a training instructor at the CIA training camp in Virginia. I trained the 12 men -- NO women -- who went on this mission. They spent about eight months at our training facility. Few knew their exact mission, which was classified "Top Secret/Codeword." I had no other involvement with this mission after 1965. I was very surprised to hear this story come to light now after all these years.

(4) I was involved with this program years ago. I was an Air Force Captain assigned to a training element at Tyndall Air Base Florida. We trained these 12 in astronaut procedures. We didn't really know their final mission, but we did know they were going into space. I didn't realize their fate until they returned. I read the classified report and first thought it was a work of fiction. But as I read the report, I realized these 12 men went to another planet, lived among aliens and returned. Four died and eight returned.

(5) The "Project SERPO" information that I just read is NOT totally correct. There were two women in the original 16 selected for training. I helped train the team, including the two women. But after the final selection process -- which did not involve any combat training like what was mentioned on the Web site, www.serpo.org -- the two women were dropped from the list. During the training, the Team Members didn't know their actual assignment. When the final cut was made, the 12 selected were sent to a military prison and then told of the assignment. The 12 were isolated from that point on. The 12 were removed from the payroll of the government and placed in a special file within the Defense Intelligence Agency. The DIA was the controlling agency in "Project CRYSTAL KNIGHT" which was the name of the operation.

(6) To comprehend the matter involving "Project SERPO," one must understand the complexity of the United States Government. "Project CRYSTALKNIGHT" pertained to the training and relocation of 12 brave United States Military Men to a foreign alien planet, 42 light years from Earth. I was one person in charge of a final phase of training. I was one person who knew the operation. I was one person who knew the names of those involved. However, I never knew the names of the 12 men sent on that special long distance mission. The names were classified. The 12 had numbers, three-digit numbers. But all of the training instructors, mission directors and project managers used their real names. I would believe that most of the older personnel involved in this project are dead. But some of us are still alive. I was shocked and outraged when I first heard about the release. This must be a Defense Intelligence Agency programmed release. I cannot believe that the DIA would allow someone to release this sensitive, highly classified operation without the proper approval. This must be a segmented release project fully controlled by the DIA. Why? I wouldn't even wish to begin to guess the reason. I am awaiting further release of the photographs, which I know exists because I saw them. There are sixteen books of photographs retrieved from the Team Members who returned. Only eight men returned. Two died on the planet and two remained for some unknown reason. Those two did not wish to return to Earth. But the returning crew brought back thousands of photographs.

(7) My father died in 1995. He was retired from the U.S. Air Force. In 1990, he told me a story about a special mission that he was involved in back in 1965. He told me that this mission was about 12 military astronauts that went to another planet in a spaceship that was found in the New Mexico desert. He said the 12 men were trained at Tyndall Air Force Base, Florida, where he was stationed. He helped train the 12 in space endurance, which he was trained to do. He said the 12 left in 1965 and came back in 1978 and he was there to check them after they returned to this planet, Earth. I didn't know what to think about my dad's story. Back then, I just listened to him and thought maybe he was just making this up. But now, I realise he was telling the truth. It is too late for my father to know about this, but I know my father was being truthful to me and that makes me feel good. I look forward to reading more about this incredible story.

(8) Having been involved with the Defense Intelligence Agency for 35 years, I am well aware that this project is real. Whether the actual released information from this "ANONYMOUS" character is correct is another story. I don't recall the exact details of the debriefing, but I know there were thousand of hours of audio recordings done on the old-style military voice recording tapes. To the best of my knowledge, those tapes are locked up in a secure vault within DIA headquarters at Bolling Air Force Base, Washington, D.C. I cannot for the life of me figure out WHY this information is being released now. I caution all involved that this might be some "rogue" DIA warrior that is trying to embarrass the DIA.

(9) I am a retired Army Colonel. I was stationed at the Defense Language Institute in the early '50s. My specialty was languages. I spoke five different languages. I was sent on a temporary duty assignment to the Special Intelligence Center Ft. Belvoir, Maryland in 1964. When I arrived, I was given a dictaphone recording of a language. I listened to that language and realized it was something I had never heard before. It didn't sound like a language, but more like pitches and tones created by some device. I was later told this language was an alien language and that I, along with others, would have to somehow translate it. Our team (18 language specialists) worked on this for six months but couldn't crack it. I then learned of a special operation mission of 12 astronauts to an alien planet. The 12 had to learn this language, but it was almost impossible for us to teach a language like this. We never did learn a single word and to the best of my knowledge, neither did the astronauts.

WHY AND WHY NOW?

If accurate or partially accurate, the release of this kind of information obviously has many ramifications. As some of the "insider" comments seem to ask, "why" and "why now?" Do people in positions of knowledge and wisdom about the situation feel the public has a "need to know" about the alleged exchange program and the related implications? According to some researchers, there has been a gradual acclimation effort for many years, getting the public ready to accept and cope with this kind of information.

Maybe we are ready now. Is there some new urgency or timing factor, either because of events in our government, internationally, on our planet or outside of our planet? Maybe the time has just come and it is judged that we can handle the truth of this situation. That would seem to be a good thing, because it might be helpful for the human race to get a better perspective and a bigger picture of human existence. Maybe it would help us rise above our wars, violence, terrorism and increase efforts to eliminate human suffering and prevent the possible very serious environmental damage to our planet.

Some people are concerned about or have predicted a coming catastrophe. They may use scientific methods to arrive at these possible scenarios. Similar concerns may have a basis in spiritual teachings, legends and warnings. Or, worries about a catastrophe for humans on Earth could be based on other conventional and unconventional intelligence sources. We can look at the news on any given day and imagine possible scenarios that could be very problematic for the human race. These scenarios could be biological, climatic, geologic or nuclear, to name a few. These may intersect too. For example, climatic or nuclear events would obviously have biological results for humans.

- Biological: A mutating bird flu is a danger. The potential of bioterrorism using an existing disease or genetically-modified disease is another. Some other disease could come at us.
- Climatic: Global warming and climate change is happening. Is there a “tipping point” coming where it will be a true disaster? Is our atmosphere in danger of some kind of collapse?
- Geologic: Is Earth due for dramatic earthquakes, volcanic activity and tsunamis? Some people think the Earth’s crust could shift in dramatic ways, causing many kinds of problems. Even a massive geological, crustal “pole shift” has been hypothesized.
- Nuclear: Will some rogue group or nation, or even a “respectable” country set off nuclear exchange that is devastating?

The dangers of these kinds of events might be dangerously close and maybe the Project SERPO information, even if it is not totally accurate, could be helpful in getting humans to change their points of view. Another reason could be that, in fact, the stories about extraterrestrial visitors, UFOs, abduction of humans and similar situations are true. Is something happening now in this area that requires greater information be made available to the public? Are we going to experience another strange incident like “The Phoenix Lights” when a huge triangular or boomerang-shaped UFO reportedly drifted silently, but very visibly, over a major American city one evening?

EXTRATERRESTRIAL VISITORS REAL?

According to information found in various sources on these subjects, there may be several types of extraterrestrial species and civilizations visiting Earth. Their motives, goals and agendas may be quite different. Their methods of operation could also differ. Some may be quite friendly and helpful to us. Some might not be or could even pose a threat. Some may just be observing in a neutral way. This is similar to our international relations on Earth. Some nations and groups of people are allies and friends, some are hostile enemies. There are relationships that are neither and are somewhere in the middle. There are complex political, military, cultural, psychological and even spiritual relationships between nations and groups of people. The term “exopolitics” describes applying normal concepts of international diplomacy to relationships with visitors from other planets. Maybe we all need a better education on exopolitics and that is why information is being released.

Some reports indicate that there may be up to nine different types of extraterrestrial civilizations visiting Earth. They may be humanoid, that is, biologically somewhat like us. There are also reports of beings who are reptile-like or insect-like in their biological form. There may also be beings who have some form that is even more different, maybe some kind of energy that does not have a concrete biological form at all. Without accepting that any of this is true, it might be useful to at least admit to the possibility that some of it could be true. This would help us be prepared for some of these possibilities, just in case they ever occur.

As with our personal and international relationships, it is good to be able to identify and establish positive relationships with friends and family. It is equally helpful to identify potential enemies, people to stay away from and to have defenses against problems associated with them. If the reports of extraterrestrial visitors are true, in a way it’s really just business as usual. Dealing with people who are different or even strange is something many of us have dealt with in life. There are good people. The existence of bad people is also an unfortunate reality. And, it’s not always easy to sort out who’s who. It’s usually better to be safe than sorry in these kinds of challenges.

THEN AND NOW

The Project SERPO information, whether accurate or inaccurate, might make us think about the brave and dedicated people in our military, intelligence and scientific communities. If extraterrestrial craft did crash in New Mexico in 1947, it would have posed a tremendous shock and worry for our national security authorities. If they did establish positive diplomatic relations with these visitors and an exchange program, that was quite an accomplishment. If any of this is true, many people wonder about what has happened in the decades since. The reports of the U.S. acquiring advanced technology make sense. The secrecy surrounding the situation also makes sense.

What other information and experiences were gained by Americans involved in these kinds of programs? Did we stay on a moral and spiritually sound path in dealing with visitors from another planet? The information on the serpo.org Web site and from many other sources gives us a few clues on these and other questions. If Anonymous and his friends and associates continue to provide us with more information, we can continue to think further about these kinds of ideas and concepts.

Again, whether true, false or partially true, these accounts of an alleged program like Project SERPO can help us grow as human beings and help us gain a better perspective on the dangers of our own making that we face. If the stories are true, we could also learn more about the way physics, time and Nature function. We might learn about possibilities for further human development, our place in the Universe, Heaven and the mysteries of a Great Spirit.

Steve Hammons is the author of two novels about a U.S. Government and military joint-service research team investigating unusual phenomena. MISSION INTO LIGHT and the sequel LIGHT'S HAND introduce readers to the ten women and men of the "Joint Reconnaissance Study Group" and their exciting adventures exploring the unknown. Both novels are available from the Barnes & Noble Web site, bn.com, and other booksellers worldwide.

Source and references: author, Steve Hammons

<http://www.americanchronicle.com/articles/viewArticle.asp?articleID=6312>